Besides, he had a gift, a gift so rare as never commenting on the failings or weaknesses of his rivals, no matter how plainly they were revealed to him.

He was never known to make unfriendly or unkind comment on other musicians or teachers, contemporaries of his, and with whom a lively competition was often waged. He was ever the first to respond when there was a call for the well, help of the musicians of Washington, Miss Helen Gladmon. and he was a ready helper for those in distress. He had, without question, given his valuable services at more concerts for the benefit of other people or organizations or churches than any other one musician of Washington. He was quick programmes of these concerts as for his own pupils, always with the greatest pains and care and without comment.

A list of his pupils would be a list of vation as a singer, that much of his success in his later years was due. She relieved him of much of the drudgery of his work, played accompaniments for him on many occasions, and wrote out the usic on paper which was created in his brain and which will make his name tion as well as an aid and a guide. Yet e never permitted any one to dominate him. recall it when necessary.

I do not dream my compositions at night. They come to me with a glad welcome, but they come during the day, when all my faculties are awake and eaget for employment. Practically all my com-posing is done during the summer, when I go to my cottage on Lake Winnebago, in Wisconsin. There, in the silence of the lake and the forest, I dream my day dreams, which I call inspirations, and at my dictation Mrs. Bischoff commits them to

In Sleep Human Beings Appear as They Are to the Blind.

By JOHN W. BISCHOFF, Mus. Doc.
For thirty-three years organist and choir director of the First Congregational Church, Washington, D. C.

The general opinion is that blindness begets isolation and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful tion and makes the mind virgin soil for wonderful dreams a right. In the cases of persons who have not engine for the blind, or who, having had such advantages, have either no desire or no necessity to use them, this may be true. As for me, I have not found it so. I lost my sight when but two years of age, and cennot remember the sensation of seeing, as the word is generally understeed. In childhood I chose music as my profession, and I ever since have been identified with it in all the avenues for activity then that it presents. In addition to my labors as the profession, and I presented the sensation of seeing, as the word is generally understeed.
